

Case Study Structure

You will need to produce a case study (of 4500 to 8000 words) focusing on your own learning process and the learning process of participants in your course or intervention.

Your case study should follow the following structure:

1. Positioning (500 to 1000 words) - deadline end of March 2009
 2. Initial understanding of shifts (500 to 1000 words) - deadline end of March 2009
 3. Description of methodology and intervention (500 to 1000 words) - deadline end of March 2009
 4. Analysis of data (1000 to 2000 words) - deadline for first draft end of October 2009
 5. Analysis of own learning process (1000 to 2000 words) - deadline of first draft end of November 2009
 6. Conclusions and lessons learned (1000 to 1500 words) - deadline for first draft end of November 2009
- Remember that ownership of your case study needs to be negotiated with your research mentor.
